I About SDUTCM

Shandong province is one of the birthplaces of Chinese civilization. There are three beautiful name cards of the province: the first one is Mount Tai, the No.1 mountain among the five most important mountains in China; the second is the ever-running Yellow River; the third is Confucius, the founder of Confucianism. It has a profound history of Chinese culture and rich tourism resources, and it is a province with a rich historical heritage and modern vitality. Shandong is also the birthplace of acupuncture and moxibustion in the world and the hometown of Bian Que, the founder of one of TCM schools. The Qilu School of TCM highlights the unique characteristic of TCM Doctor with Confucian philosophy.

Shandong University of Traditional Chinese Medicine (SDUTCM) was founded in 1958, listed as one of the key state construction TCM higher-learning institutes in 1978, and approved as one of the key Shandong provincial universities in 1981. It is currently the only independent medical university in Shandong Province, and rated excellent in the national undergraduate education evaluation conducted by the Ministry of Education. It is among the first batch of five preeminent featured universities approved by Shandong provincial government. Among all the colleges and universities in Shandong province, it takes the lead in the number of the state key disciplines, in offering master's and doctoral programs and post-doctoral research programs, and also in undertaking the state 973 Projects as a chief organization. In the 2021 Soft Science China Best Discipline ranking, Traditional Chinese Medicine ranked 6th, Integrated Chinese and Western Medicine ranked 5th, and Clinical Medicine, Pharmacology and Toxicology entered the top 1% of ESI worldwide.
